

BIO

Dr. Tzu-Hung Hsiao works as a research fellow in the Department of Medicine at Taichung Veterans General Hospital. He is also the principle investigator of genomics Lab of Center of Precision Medicine at Taichung Veterans General Hospital. He received his PhD in 2011 from Electrical Engineering, National Taiwan University. He has more than 10 years of experiences working as bioinformation. He also pursued cross-disciplinary training that spans across engineering, informatics, biology, and medicine. His current research focuses on precision health that integrate large genomic and medical data to study the risk of various diseases.