

BIO

Te-Lun Mai is a computational biologist at National Taiwan University.

His research seeks to explore the mechanisms of co-/posttranscriptional regulation, such as A-to-I RNA editing and circular RNAs, in complex human diseases, with a focus on brain disorders. He employs bioinformatics, network science, and evolutionary biology to address fundamental and practical biomedical research questions.